The Boston Herald Waging Fierce Battle on the Brewers.

An interesting contest is now going on in Massachusetts between the Boston Herald, one of New England's leading newspapers, and the brewers, who until recently have used the Herald as an advertising medium.

It all came about through the enactment by the Massachusetts legislature of what is known as the Bar and Bottle law, which law will become effective the first of May, 1911. Under the license laws of Massachusetts, licenses for beverage purposes may be issued in two general classes. One class permits the sale over the bar for drinking on the premises, the other permits the sale in bottles for carrying away or not to be drunk on the premises.

As a rule, the liquor dealer takes out both licenses and after selling over the bar until closing hour he advises his customers to purchase a bottle of liquor to take away. As a result the debauch which begins at the bar is continued in the home or elsewhere.

The new law is designed to separate the two classes of licenses at the same place. The person who takes out a bar license will not under the new law be permitted to take out a bottle license, and the law works the other way also.

After the battle in the legislature which resulted in the enactment of this law came rumors of aggressive action on the part of the liquor men to defeat those senators and representatives who voted for the measure. At this time, the Boston Herald took a hand in the fight against the brewers and charged them with attempting to punish the paper because of its advocacy of the Bar and Bottle bill. At the same time the Herald devoted several columns to pointed truths about the methods of control exercised by the brewers over the saloons. This fight the Herald has kept up until it has stirred not only old Boston and Massachusetts but all of New-England.

The brewers for years have been sending broadcast stories of their purpose to eliminate those objectionable features from the saloon business which have done so much to produce the great uprisings for no-license. The onslaught made by the Herald shows that even while setting forth the methods of their reform they have been acting improperly in elections, the appointment of license officials, the distribution of licenses and in attempting to subsidize newspapers.

The Herald also shows that eighty per cent. of the saloons of Boston are controlled by a very few brewers by means of mortgages upon the stock of the saloons. It also shows that the brewers have gone into town politics, exerting the same improper influence, and thus the fight impresses the public with necessity for action in checking the power of brewing corporations.

The forceful fight made by the Herald is of service to the cause of temperance in general. The Herald is by no means considered a radical temperance paper; in fact, its attitude has always been one of such extreme liberality that by many temperance people it was considered a liquor organ. That it is being boycotted by the liquor interests because of its stand on the Bar and Bottle bill and because it is telling some great truths about the methods employed by the liquor men indicates that the brewers insert and pay for advertising, not solely for the publicity desired, but that they may be immune from the publication of adverse news or editorial criticism.—American Issue.

The amount of money spent every year for liquor by our American citizens would, if converted into silver dollars and placed one on the other, rear 30,000 columns, each equal in height to the Washington Monument.—The Amethyst.

50 Per Cent Better

"I have used less than one bottle of Cardui," writes Mrs. Gertrude Ward, of Rushville, Neb., "and am feeling fifty per cent better than when I began taking it."

"Before taking Cardui, I had suffered with female trouble, for eight years. My greatest trouble was irregularity. I also suffered with severe pains, every month, but now I am greatly improved and will recommend Cardui to all my suffering friends."

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

The rare medicinal herbs of Cardui are imported by the manufacturers direct from Europe and are not to be found in any other medicine.

These ingredients are what give Cardui its superiority, as a female medicine and tonic, over any other medicine.

For over 50 years Cardui has been the favorite woman's medicine. The ladies like it, because it is so easy to take, so gentle, so safe, so reliable in its results, and they have faith in its curative tonic powers, because of the thousands of other ladies it has helped. Try it today.
